"" Stricken child SAN FRANCISCO IOWIS AP. An FBI forensics expert visited a California hospital Thursday to sift through ashes from the cremation of a Bay Area toddler. The toddler's body was found in August near San Francisco, two months after he was abducted from his parents' home in San Francisco. A 54-page affidavit cited by AP says the FBI's full-body X-ray scan of the ashes found a number of details that make it appear as if the child had a rare disease. Also found was a mystery object that looks like a "toy" and a coil that may be used to inject insulin, according to an FBI expert cited by AP. The lead agent on the case, FBI Agent Kenneth Alton, was quoted as saying that the toddler looked as if he had "a condition that causes a build-up of calcium within the upper chest." Agents will travel to the California hospital within the next few days to retest the images. Branco Foki(> R?^[-prt!$ney*arm .
