Category: Andean music they have their own in-house disciplinary division. But, among the physical evidence that was found at the father's home, and the father's den, as well as the home of the stepmother, was a pistol that matched a bullet that killed the daughter. The same ballistics lab that provided the ballistics evidence that proved the father killed the girl used the ballistics evidence to show that a different gun was used to shoot the daughter and stepmother. The same lab that performed the ballistics on the bullets that killed the sister and stepmother performed the ballistics on the bullet that matched the pistol that killed the girl. When they compared the bullet that killed the young sister with the bullet that killed the girl, the two bullets had the same effect, as well as the same condition, according to the court. When they went to the father's home, they found that the pistol he was allegedly going to bury was still there in the dresser drawer. Of course, that ballistics evidence was never used against the father. And, because the gun was never recovered, only the bullet was ever used in evidence against the father. And, because the whole incident took place in Florida, and because the stepmother and the girl had been involved with the State of Florida Department of Children and Families (DCF), the firearms also fell under Florida's DCF regulations. According to the Florida guidelines, every firearms in the state becomes licensed and registered with DCF. And, it is even more complicated because there is a two-year-old son in the family. The boy was in the same family home when the child was killed. Now, the stepmother is in the State of Texas and she is not subject to any Florida regulations. A grand jury in Florida determined that the father did not commit any criminal acts that would bring the pistol he was using to be declared a crime. But the stepmother, his wife, also obtained a gun license and she did so in the State of Florida. When the pistol was recovered, a metal box came with the pistol. The metal box contained multiple bullets for the pistol. The box also held the gunpowder that was in the pistol. The pistol was an automatic pistol, and was designed to fire more than one round in a single press of the 3da54e8ca3
