iTunes Accessory is a tiny and lightweight audio widget that has the ability to launch the iTunes player and allow you to control basic media functionality: pause, play, skip to next/previous track, adjust volume, mute/unmute, etc. It works from the lock screen, and integrates with Apple's Podcasts. You can double-click the widget or drag it to the dock to quick access the iTunes player controls. You can change the size of the widget, its opacity, and set it to dock on all open windows. iAccessory comes with several helpful widgets, such as Internet Radio, Podcasts, Home, and Showcase. The iAccessory widget downloads media artwork for an album when you click on it in the widget. You can enable/disable this feature from the Settings option. When the iTunes player is not active, the iAccessory widget continuously displays artwork and album cover; however, the artwork can be removed from the widget by double-tapping it or dragging it out of the widget. iTunes Accessory runs seamlessly and requires zero system resources.
